Jacob goes into Egypt; stands before Pharaoh; settles in the Land of Goshen, &c. &c.

HAVING soon settled all their concerns in Canaan, Jacob and his family set off in the carriages which Joseph had sent for them out of Egypt, gypt, to take their journey. Having gone part of the way one night in a dream he appeared to him, and to bless him, and to make them a great assurance of this promise of favour. He was man chearfully pursued with a pleasing expectation of Joseph, after a long absence.

Judah went on before them, that his father Jacob might see which, Joseph made ready to go down to meet his father and his company, just to the province which lay just before. Here a scene too affecting was presented to view. One of the good old man is drowned.
